Do you know why you wash your hands?

What happens when you wash them? Washing means much more than just having your hands look clean

Most people place very little importance on washing their hands.

If they look clean, they are satisfied.

It means more than that.

As a matter of health, it is hard to exaggerate the importance of washing your hands properly and at the right time.

The nature of your skin tells you why proper washing is important. If you have ever looked at your skin through a magnifying glass you know why. The picture on this page shows you how the skin is covered with little openings. They are the mouths of the fat and sweat glands. Every inch of skin on the palm of your hand, for example, contains 2700 of these little mouths.

Through these mouths the skin gives off oils, perspiration, waste matter from the system.

This cast-off matter is thrown off at the rate of 2 pints every 24 hours. It accumulates on the skin, gathers up dust, dirt and impurities. This is why—when you come home from work—from shopping—the movies—and most of all before eating—it is of the greatest importance to wash your hands properly.

What soap really does

The moment soap and water come in contact with the skin, the soap separates into two parts.

One part dissolves and absorbs the impurities in the mouths of the skin.

The other part forms a lather which takes up these impurities together with dirt and dust and carries them off into the water.

A new standard for cleansing—antiseptic cleanliness

It was the need of keeping these mouths in the skin thoroughly clean, purified, that gave the biggest soap makers in the world their idea of making a soap that would do more than cleanse.

They undertook to make a soap that would leave the skin antiseptically clean—what doctors call clean. They selected for their soap the antiseptic which is considered by medical authorities as one of the greatest aids known for the health of the skin.

This antiseptic soap was so successful that it was called Lifebuoy—the savor, the protector—when it was introduced in England.

Today, in America, the name "Lifebuoy Soap" means the soap that saves the skin, protects it.

Keep your skin clear and smooth — prevent skin troubles

People are coming to realize more and more the value of protection. Health authorities are teaching that the best way to keep well is to guard the health every day.

Your skin needs protection. To neglect the skin is to invite trouble. Improper cleansing means that perspiration acids and impurities are left in the pores, which clog them, preventing the skin from casting off further waste matter.

Thousands of men and women could tell you that washing with Lifebuoy keeps their skin in such fine condition that it glows with health.

The odor tells you why

The "health" odor in Lifebuoy is found in no other soap. It is not a perfume—not the odor of a medicine—but a pure, hygienic odor that tells you instantly why the soap benefits your skin. Stimulating, invigorating, refreshing! One whiff of Lifebuoy, and you realize why it cleanses so thoroughly, and protects.

Begin to use the "health" soap today for your face, hands and bath. Get a cake at any grocery or drug store. Start now and watch your skin improve.

Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

This shows the structure of the skin on your hand. When you see all the tiny, open mouths you realize how important it is to keep your skin antiseptically clean

"For a fine, healthy skin, give me Lifebuoy."

"I thoroughly enjoy Lifebuoy—it gives the skin the protection everyone needs."

Its antiseptic lather soothes chafed skin—keeps the skin healthy. Women who wash their babies' skin with Lifebuoy know how it soothes, comforts, heals. When you see how Lifebuoy helps the chafed skin, you realize why it keeps your skin glowing with health.

EXPECT CONGRESS WILL SIT UNTIL SEPTEMBER

Washington, March 19.—Because war expenses are running lighter than had been expected, the work of Congress this session will be prolonged probably into September. Committee dealing with war appropriations will need more time to go over revisions of figures with the executive branch. The War Department, for instance, is now about one-third under its scheduled expenses as estimated when appropriations and authorizations were granted last fall. This is because shipping is not available to carry all the supplies estimated a few months ago, and the department is now making a revision of its estimates. It is expected that the session will not close until the middle of September.

Why Prohibition Is Not A War Issue

Prohibition as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which the Massachusetts Legislature is now asked to ratify, is not a war issue for three reasons:

First—It could not be brought about soon enough to affect the outcome of the war.

Second—Congress has already provided full protection to the nation as far as the liquor question is concerned.

Third—European experience proves that military success does not depend upon prohibition.

RATIFICATION of the proposed amendments requires favorable action by 36 states. While there are 27 under state prohibition, that has nothing to do with ratification except as indicating how these states may vote. Ratification, if achieved at all, will come only after several years' struggle, and the amendment cannot go into effect until one year after the 36th state ratifies it. Therefore, national prohibition could not have any effect on the war in less than three or four years at the earliest. Will the war last that long? If not then prohibition is necessarily eliminated as a war measure.

Already Protected—Soon after the United States declared war, Congress prohibited the further manufacture of distilled liquors, to take effect early in October. Within two or three years the existing supply will be exhausted—long before prohibition could be put into effect even under the most favorable circumstances. Moreover, President Wilson has full authority over fermented liquors. He has reduced materials used in making beer 30 per cent, and has limited its alcoholic content to 2.75 per cent. He can suppress its further manufacture tomorrow, if he deems such action wise or necessary.

Not Required by War—Upon the outbreak of war England restricted liquor; but Englishmen still enjoy their customary beverages, and British troops are supplied with beer and, upon occasion, rum as well.

France restricted the use of distilled liquors, but her troops are abundantly supplied with good wine, which is not denied even to our own soldiers in France.

Italy's fighting men are still drinking their native wines.

The soldiers of the Central Empires are served with beer, fifth of the output of their breweries being commandeered for the army.

In Russia alone have we seen an entire nation under prohibition as a war measure. Little Belgium, with the greatest per capita beer consumption in the world, saved civilization. Emphatically there is nothing in the experience of European nations to support the claim that prohibition is necessary as a war measure.

REJOICE OVER DAYLIGHT SAVING

Boston Chamber of Commerce Members Active for Reform

The news of the signing by the President of the Daylight Saving Bill was the occasion for a great deal of quiet jubilation on the part of the officers and leaders of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, which has been the most active civic organization in America in the work for this reform.

The first action taken by the Chamber was the appointment, some years ago, of a special committee, headed by A. Lincoln Plinn and composed of prominent business and educational, professional men, labor leaders and civic workers. The committee made an exhaustive study of the whole matter and published a report which has been acknowledged to be the most authoritative and comprehensive publication ever issued on the subject.

The committee recommended the adoption of daylight saving for the entire year, which was endorsed by the board of directors. A referendum was then taken of the 5,000 members of the Chamber of Commerce and the result showed that about 97 per cent. of the members favored the plan.

The Boston men then urged the Chamber of Commerce of the United States to take up the matter. The national body, using the Boston report for its guide, began a campaign which has resulted in the action just taken by Congress. At the big business "War Convention," held last Fall at Atlantic City, the Boston delegation worked for a Daylight Saving plank in the business platform adopted by the convention and met with no success. Since that time there has been a constant bombardment with petitions from trade boards all over the United States for the adoption of the reform.

PRaises AMERICAN

The Boston AMERICAN deserves the highest credit for the part it has taken in the long fight, said Secretary James M. Moore of the Boston Chamber of Commerce today. The AMERICAN has kept up a continuous agitation for Daylight Saving, which has proved to be very effective in securing the reform.

The members of the committee would have been pleased to have seen the reform adopted for the entire year, but their desire the bill passed by Congress is an entering wedge which will result in an extension of the months to which daylight saving will be applied.

Hate That Bring the Summer Nearer

HELPING YOUR COUNTRY

You Can Do It by Changing Your Habits to Meet New Conditions

By Eleanor Gilbert

If you have tried to be a big girl at your life, enjoying it, advancing and planning, and then, because your Uncle Sam needed help, you called yourself a pious little fellow to work for a war in duty.

If you had a cozy little home near your friends, and you broke it up and went to live unconfortably in one of the crowded, hospital villages where your husband was fighting a war.

If you have learned to do some manual job which soils your white hands, but which is at present more useful than your pretty, unsoiled, refined position.

Then I say you have succeeded to one of the most difficult jobs for all women, even in the name of patriotism. For it is not the hard work, or even the service of the hour, which require it, but the idea of work because you have become used to it—these are the enervating tendencies which so often prevent us from doing what is more essential.

I heard the other day of a woman who applied for government work, but who absolutely refused to leave the small town in which she lived. She was used to it, she said; all her friends were there, and the idea of changing to another city was absolutely repellant to her. All her habits or life were attached to this one place. She had no curiosity about going anywhere else, and not even patriotic service could tempt her to change her living habits.

Then there are many cases of girls who won't change from an occupation they've been used to to an industry where the need of help is great, simply because they think they cannot change their habits of work.

Of course if the new work promises some thrill or a remote chance of getting her picture in the papers she may be willing to change. But from the novel jobs where women are asked to do, the military demands of military routine.

Men who have had the military orders all their lives have had to acquire the habit of taking orders—sometimes from a man, sometimes from a civilian life they would have considered inferior.

It is not misanthropic to say that men who have had to drop out of their tasks and customs immediately and do something else have because it is warlike. That would mean demoralization to the purpose. But you can hold your self in readiness for the possible big changes by willing habits of work.

Nobody could find a thing and it was a matter of time before the tiger would find him.

Before the cage the hidden hand was now a matter of seconds when the growing fury of the brute, his jaws flaming would break the bars.

Anecdotes of the Famous

There are, of course, jokes and jokes, popular, practical ones, as Miss Maud Allan, the famous dancer, found to her cost when giving a special performance of Salome at Adelphi some time before the war.

As she approached the sublime climax of the dance, whence Salome kisses the severed head of John the Baptist, she suddenly realized that she was holding the actual head of a dead man.

She managed to go through the few remaining movements until the fall of the curtain. Then she collapsed.

Incidents elicited that a certain Count Zevy, a great Hungarian nobleman, had exhibited the head of a recently executed criminal for the paper, made head usually used in the dance.
